INTERMEDIATE MICROECONOMIC THEORY

FALL 2015

Instructor: Xin Wangn Wangn ct We will show how a consumer may make optimal 1 choices, how individual demands are formed, and how market demand can be derived. Part 3 discusses the firm's technologies, production functions and production costs. We shall see how firms can make the optimal input choices to minimize production costs. This lays the foundation for the study of behavior of firms under different forms of market structure. Part 4 inte

TEXTBOOK

1. Lecture notes. I will post INCOMPLETE lecture notes on the course website before each class. You should print them yourself and fill them out during classes.

2. Besanko and Braeutigam, "Microeconomics", 5th Edition, Wiley. (Other editions are also fine) It is a highly recommended learning strategy to read relevant chapters in the textbook before each lecture.

GRADES

Your final grade will be determined on the maximum of the following two calculations:

Method 1		Method 2
Problem Sets	10%	Problem Sets	10%
Participation	20%	Participation	20%

LAPTOP POLICY

There is to be no laptop usage in this class at any time, for any reason. The only exception to this rule is if disability services mandate that you must be allowed to use a laptop for note taking purposes. In this case, an official letter from disability services is required.

EMAIL

I will answer emails between 9am and 5pm from Monday to Friday. I will do my best to return emails within 24 hours. I will not answer to those asking questions answered in the syllabus (grading, office hours/location) or available on the course site. If you email me a question about lectures, exams, or assignments I will most likely encourage
