

Contributions of different feedback assistance to text memorial representation

University of Colorado, Boulder, Colorado erism contributed to the problem, insofar as an as-nist model was accepted as a given. This model archers to decompose more complex learning into nal description of the town has been slightly modified, so we chose to call our town Mapleton. As in Perrig and Kintsch's research, there are two descriptive versions of ry & Anderson, 1972).

the absence of any automatic am vey description, while the other is a route version that guides the driver through the town. The stories were typed accepted, as well as the payment of small order with prior... worst offenders... two from each session. We also...

1'

1

1

LANGER, KEENAN, AND BERGMAN

g supplemental information to assist processing for the text pro-here is little reason to suspect that feedback served basically tive function. Again, when subjects request assistance, we as-at it is the outcome of a direct decision to test certain assumpout understanding. Indeed we have argued in the past that text

BERLINER, D. C., & ROSENHINE, B. (1977). The acquisition of knowledge in the classroom. In R. C. Anderson, R. J. Spiro, & W. E. Montague (Eds.), Schooling and the acquisition of knowledge (pp. 375-404). Hillsdale, NJ: Erlbaum.

BRITTON, B. K., & BLACK, J. B. (1985). Understanding expository text.
Hillsdale, NJ: Erlbaum.